

Political Vetting & Opposition Research

Forward Risk's Political Vetting & Opposition Research team combines its direct experience supporting political campaigns and advocacy groups with a rigorous and creative approach to investigations.

Based in Washington, DC, our team is led by seasoned investigators who previously conducted opposition research at the Democratic National Committee. We draw upon our collective expertise, derived from experience working for high-profile political campaigns and committees, government agencies, and media outlets.

A political campaign's success or failure can hinge on a revealing statement or a key piece of information from a candidate's past. Forward Risk's political vetting and opposition research services provide in-depth portraits of candidates, nominees, and incumbents, highlighting the findings that will make a difference.

How We Help

▶ Investigating campaign opponents

Forward Risk conducts a wide-ranging review of political opponents to uncover negative information that can be used during the course of a campaign. We examine news clips and social media, civil litigation and criminal records, and also undertake discreet human source inquiries and/or Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests when appropriate, with a view to uncovering pertinent primary source materials.

▶ Contextualizing opponents' political track record and affiliations

Forward Risk analyzes a candidate's voting record, as well as their comments on matters of public interest, to identify key statements and positions. We not only comb through campaign finance filings and financial disclosure reports, among other sources, but we also translate our research findings into easily understandable information for internal and external stakeholders.

▶ Executing defensive research

Forward Risk provides in-depth vulnerability assessments into a candidate's background prior to running in order to mine potential weaknesses. We also carry out comprehensive vetting of potential employees, surrogates, and large donors, as well as fact checking of a campaign's public-facing materials (like ads and emails) for accuracy.

Our Experience

Forward Risk's work often makes headlines. In 2021, for instance, our opposition research for a congressional campaign in Georgia uncovered a previously unreported series of lawsuits regarding allegations of domestic abuse that occurred in the wake of the candidate's contentious divorce and custody battle, which successfully bolstered our client's communications and messaging strategy.

We also help to keep you out of the spotlight. For example, in 2020, we completed self-research for a first-time candidate in Michigan and found embarrassing comments that he made on social media when he was in high school. He was able to remove those posts before they were discovered by a wider audience.

We listen to our clients. We don't try to shoehorn a complex investigation into a pre-defined package that can be mass-produced. Through understanding each client's concerns and goals, we tailor our research and our reporting to what is most actionable.

We devote time, resources, and care to our work. Where other firms may pressure investigators to prioritize speed over quality, we are absolutely committed to thoroughness, depth, accuracy, and proper analysis. This is how we build strong and long-lasting relationships with our clients.
